

PRESIDENT

Findlay, Ohio

The University of Findlay, a comprehensive independent university, invites applications and nominations for its presidency, an appointment that will become effective on or about July 1, 2010. The handsome Northwest Ohio campus enrolls over 3,100 undergraduate and 1,300 graduate students and is approximately a two-hour drive from the urban centers of Columbus, Detroit and Cleveland.

The stature of the university is at its highest level in its 127-year history. Its last decade has been marked by expanded and strengthened curricular and student programs, a stabilized fiscal profile, a greatly enhanced physical plant, and a heightened sense of community on campus. The next president will benefit from substantial institutional momentum as the university is poised to continue moving forward and to express fully its evolved profile. The Findlay presidency provides a significant opportunity for creative and inspired leadership.

The University of Findlay's curricular offerings reflect a spirit of innovation and entrepreneurship. Through its College of Business, College of Health Professions, College of Education, College of Liberal Arts, College of Sciences, and the newly established College of Pharmacy, Findlay offers more than 60 majors leading to baccalaureate degrees, eight master's degrees, a doctor of pharmacy, and a doctor of physical therapy. Findlay is a nimble, forward-looking university that continually adapts programs and teaching methods to prepare today's students "for meaningful lives and productive careers."

The seventeenth president will have the opportunity to lead The University of Findlay to ever-greater distinction. Experience with successful strategic planning, resource generation and management, and board development will be important, as will leadership skills that instill confidence, inspire trust, and draw on the potential of all Findlay constituencies.
